

ENERGY ASSESSMENT

Minnesota residential natural gas customers

Great Plains Natural Gas residential customers in Minnesota are eligible to have an energy assessment performed on their home for a cost of $50.

A home energy assessment gives you a thorough picture of where your home is losing energy and how you can save money.

Here is how the program works:

Fill out the application and send it to Great Plains. If you are approved for an energy assessment, Great Plains will notify you, and a third-party contractor will contact you to schedule the audit. Once the audit is complete, Great Plains will bill you $50 for the assessment. Typically a home energy assessment can cost up to $500. Great Plains has a limited number of residential energy assessments available to its natural gas customers, and assessments are approved in the order in which they are received.

If you are interested in a home energy assessment, fill out the application form in this insert and mail it to:

Energy Assessment Request Agreement

I wish to have an energy assessment performed on my home. I understand that Great Plains Natural Gas Co. (Great Plains), through its Conservation Improvement Program (CIP), has a limited number of assessments available. The assessment will be performed by a state certified auditor contracted by Great Plains.

Upon receipt of the application it will be determined if there are assessments available and you will be notified whether or not an assessment will be performed on your home. If you are selected to have an assessment performed, the contractor will contact you to schedule the assessment. Assessments are awarded on a first come first served basis. Signing below gives Great Plains permission to provide one year of natural gas usage information to the contractor.

☐ I would like an Energy Assessment performed on my home, and I understand that I will be billed $50 for the Energy (missed appointments with the auditor may result in an additional $50 charge for each occurrence.)
